

Take Test: Plagiarism Declaration Form

Test Information

Description This is the Plagiarism Declaration Form for the School of Mathematics and Statistics.

You need to complete this Declaration in every Mathematics and Statistics subject that you take.

Please first read the following BACKGROUND INFORMATION:

PLAGIARISM is the presentation by a student of an assignment or other piece of work which has in fact been copied in whole or in part from another student's work, or from any other source (e.g., published books or periodicals and material from internet sites) without due acknowledgement in the text.

TEAMWORK: It is the goal of all subjects in the School of Mathematics and Statistics to develop generic skills that will be useful in the workplace in addition to developing specific skills, knowledge and understanding in Mathematics and Statistics. A key generic skill is teamwork. Students are encouraged to work with each other (both inside and outside tutorials) to develop their technical skills and to increase their knowledge and

Question Completion Status:

COLLUSION: In the case of marked assignments or other non-examination assessments in the School of Mathematics and Statistics, such teamwork includes general discussion and sharing of ideas on the work. All written work must however (without specific authorisation to the contrary) be done by individual students. Students are neither permitted to copy any part of another student's work nor permitted to allow their own work to be copied by other students. Further clarification of plagiarism and collusion can be found at academichonesty.unimelb.edu.au

MISCONDUCT: Students are strictly forbidden to purchase assignments from private tutors or internet sites, and must not seek or obtain help with assignments from other people, whether fellow students, University employees or people from outside the University, in person, via social media, or via other internet means of communication. Such forms of cheating attract severe penalties.

When you complete this form, you will be making the required Plagiarism Declarations by answering "Agree" to the question.
